A WEST VIRGINIA VASSAR COLLEGE And How Such an Institution May be Started and Made a Great Success.

By Rev. A. C. George. D.D. Vassar College, located in Poughkeepsie New York, is a nen-sectarian institution exclusively for young women, and em ry with his father's family when he was but a child. He inherited no patrimony from his ancestors, but accumulated quite a large fortune by his own industry and enterprise. In February, 1861, he made over to a Board of Trustees, incorporated for that purpose, $408,000, for the endow-most of Vesser College for young women. ment of Vassar College for young women. for the location of the billioning, about one mile from Poughkeepsie. Indeed, his aggregate gifts to the institution amounted to more than $800,000. His purpose was not to found a charity school, but a college for women where they could have advantages for education fully equal to those offered to the other sex. His plan comprehended an art gallery. a good and comprehended an art gallery, a good a growing library, and the most competen ors in every department.

instructors in every department.

Mr. Vassar was wise in not postponing his great enterprise till after his death, to be consummated by his executors, or to be defeated by the cupidity of legal heirs, and the strategies of the courts. He lived to see the college building erected, the endowment funds invested, and the school opened. He died very suddenly, June 23, 1808, while addressing the Trustees at the anniversary of the opening of the institution, to which he had devoted the labors and accumulations of his life. The houses of the publicans and drank wine, bors and accumulations of his life. The college has thus far had a successful ca-reer, and has exerted a marked influence in the direction of the higher education of in the direction of the higher education of women.

It is now proposed to erect a bronze statue of the founder of Vassar College just in frent of the central entrance to the edifice, at an estimated cost of from $3,000 to $10,000. The statue when mounted on its pedestal is to be seventeen feet high, and on its base is to be inscribed a sentiment once uttered by Mr. Vassar, namely: "The mothers of a country mould the character of its citizens, eletermine its institutions, and shape its destiny." This is all very well, but it strikes us that the College itself is Matthew Vassar's imperishable monument. The building may burn, and the invested funds may be squandered, and the institution may cease to exist; but the historic past cannot be obliterated. The example of the decease to exist; but the insure past cannot be obliterated. The example of the devotion of a large fortune to educational purposes, and that during a man's lifetime, has already created a wide influence, and moved others in the same direction. The record must remain, the facts will glow in he memories of men, and the students of Vassar especially will carry with them to every corner of the land the inspiration of every corner of the land the inspiration of that great act of consecration, from which their alma mater was born. If Matthew Vassar had simply acquired a great fortune and died a wealthy man, his name would never-have been mentioned beyond the narrow circle of his family and acquaintances, and his memory would soon have perished from the earth.

What an opportunity have the wealthy quaintances, and his memory would soon have perished from the earth.

What an opportunity have the wealthy men of West Virginia to do a great work for the cause of education! With scarcely any limitation, the State is before them where to choose. A collegiate institution preceded by the name of Goff, or Bishop, or List, or McGrew, or Boreman, or whatever it might be, would, if organized as a first-class academic institution, sustained by a great and growing denomination, and entrenched in local interests and affections, carry the fame of its fortunate founder into the future, as one who had unsealed a fountain of living water for the refreshment of generations. It is worth living in this world to be able to accomplish such a work.

Although under the patronage and control of the Methodist Episcopal Church, such an institution may find its principal benefactor in some liberal and far-seeing man of another denomination. An illustration in point is the case of Marcus Hustration in point is the case of Marcus Hustration in point is the case of Marcus Hustration in the found written in the who is furnishing the chief part of the means for the erection of a building on the grounds of Allegheny College at Meadville, for the accommodation of the young women who now are, or who hereafter may be connected with that institution. The women who now are or who hereafter may be connected with that institution. The building will occupy a commanding position on the campus, will cost from $20,000 to $25,000, will be known as "Hulings Hall," and will associate the name and Christian consecration of a good, earnest man with all the future of Allegheny College. For such an object one might well lift himself above all sectarian limitations. "It seems to be settled as definitely as anything can be settled, which is dependant on the popular will," says a leading journalist who is a member of the New York Board of Regents of the State University, "that higher education must trust to private individuals for its endowment and its support. We believe this determination to be right, but, whether right or wrong, it is the determination recognized or acquiesced in by all friends of the cause of education. This being so, the burden is laid upon voluntaryism to be equal to its duty—to meet cheerfully the demands made upon it. These demands are as exalted as they are imperative." We cannot regret that this is so; for self dependence means self development, and a whole cluster of manly and heroic virtues. Nothing brings greater honor to a State than the devolvo of its citizens to a worthy cause; and nothing demonstrates Christianity to the world like the beneficent offerings of those who, for the sake of their Divine Master, live to bless and benefit their fellow men. to private individuals for its endowment and its support. A Wholesome Ohio Law that Should be Enforced.

Claciansati Enquirer.

An effort is being made by the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics in this State to enforce the law which prevents the issuance of scrip by mine-owners and others to their employes. This plan of organized robbery has been followed for many years in the mining regions, and by it operatives have been deprived of from one-fourth to one-half of their scant wages. The last Legislature passed a law to put a stop to such proceedings, hedging its violation with penalties of fine and imprisonment. Still it has been disregarded up to the prevent it me, for the reason that the mine-owners were rich and powerful, and by in the mining regions, and by it operatives have been deprived of from one-fourth to one-half of their scant wages. The last Legislature passed a law to put a stop to such proceedings, hedging its violation with penalties of fine and imprisonment. Still it has been disregarded up to the present time, for the reason that the mine-owners were tich and powerful, and by their influence prevented Grand Juries from indicting them. Now that statistics are being gathered by the Commissioner of Labor Statistics there is some hope that the law will be enforced, and the miners will at least get the wages they work so will at least get the wages they work so hard to earn.

2. Now, lo in those days there were two synagogues in which the people worshipped, One was the Democratic synagogue, the other was the Republican. The latter one was many cubits high and had been beautified with all manner of devices made of golden shekels, even to the altar thereof, and the candlesticks thereon.

3. There was a son of the tribe of Rutherford named Foster, who was one of the high priests of this synagogue, and who was clad in comely apparel which was covered with shekels of gold; yea, even to the skirts thereof.

4. The sons of Rutherford and Roscoe and of Blaine cried with a loud voice, "We will have Foster and none other; he will be a foster-father to us, and shall lead us through the wilderness, and make our land a goodly land, and our pockets shall be laden with shekels, yea even golden shekels."

The Wheeling INTELLIGENCER is doing a good work in bringing to the knowledge of the public the extravagant, if not some thing worse, manner in which the Insti tution for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind, at Romney, has been conducted during the past year. Good Testimony.

"I feel that I have been benefited, and can now attend to the ordinary duties of my business, without serious inconvenience. I desire to add my testimony to that of thousands who have already done so, as to the virtues and healing properties of your Bethesda Water."—[Letter to Col. Dunbar, discoverer of Bethesda Water.

Has the late war proved a failure? This the South toward the North at present, is receiving serious consideration by the majority of the people in the latter section Certainly in one respect it has not proved a failure. We have the soil back again, a failure. We have the soil back again, although not "pinned by bayonets;" but the mutterings which reach our ears from various parts of the South tell very plainly that we have not entirely conquered all the people. This is evidenced by the facts: First—That within the present year the Okolona States (a newspaper which, if we take the word of a majority of the Southern Democratic papers, is a fair representative of Southern sentiment) has been publishing articles of the most inflammatory character. Second—The inflammatory character. Second — The fact has been developed that school books used for the instruction of Southern children, and at present in use in at least some parts of the South, certain rank braces preparatory and collegiate departments. In 1870, there were thirty members in the corps of instruction, 116 preparatory students and 205 in the collegiate classes. The grounds, building and apparatus were valued at $881,286, and the corporation held, in addition, $231,000 of productive funds, yielding an annual income of $18,376. The receipts for tultion fees during the preceding year amounted to $57,852. Including a total annual income of $76,228.

This institution is the fruit of the intelligent liberality of Matthew Vassar, whose name it bears. Mr. Vassar was an Englishman by birth, but came to this country with his father's family when he was but a child. He inherited no patrimony from his ancestors, but accumulated quite a large fortune by his own industry and enterprise. In February, 1861, he made for that purpose, $408,000, for the endowof public sentiment in the North through the medium of our press and public speakers. It has been charged by the Democracy that in the coming campaign in Ohio "the bloody shirt" would drip its gore upon the heads of voters, wielded in the hands of the Republican party. However true this may be, it is the duty of every Republican stumper in Ohio and elsewhere to truthfully show to the people the real condition of things, and let the opposition apply whatever name they please to it.

Bellaire, O., July 11, 1879.

There are forty teachers, counting the uperintendent, in the city, and 125 in the ounty outside, the terms in the country ing on an average probably half as long those in the city. The Steubenville eachers received for their services during teachers received for their services during theschool year $20,235 11, and the country teachers, $34,488 06, a difference of $14,-$25 95. The building and contingent ex-penses of the city exceeded those in the country by $11,221 05. The total disburse-ments in the country exceed those in the city by $3,031.
